“ My most vivid memory was in middle school when a dude wanted to fight me over a girl.... We fought, but after school he brought about 10 dudes with him from one of Galveston’s most notorious neighborhoods known for gang banging to jump me behind Central middle school by the tennis courts. I was scared to say the least I didn’t really have a crew, but me and (Anthony Fields) better known as Strawberry was cool..... I knew Marlon, but not very well.... Well I went and told Berry what was going on and he said you gotta fight, but you ain’t getting jumped.... Marlon was right there when I told Berry and he wasn’t feeling that sh!t at all..... Marlon was laced up and ready to go.... I walked out and they were behind me. It’s was 3 against around 10.... I expected Berry to have my back because we were pretty tight, but Marlon was a surprise. He didn’t think it was right as a little kid and he stood on that.... I will never forget that and I’m happy I had the opportunity to tell him I never forgot and I appreciate him standing up for me while we were adults....

R.I.P to a real one..... Marlon Davis

“ My heart is heavy, but my spirit is at peace. Marlon, my first love, my lifelong friend, my "Pookie Poo" (inside joke), you've been a part of my life since I was 12. We grew up together, and no matter where life took us, we never left each other's lives. Through every season, you believed in me, especially as a teacher. You were my biggest cheerleader, always reminding me that I was making a difference, that I didn't need to stress - that I was enough. You were my safe place to vent, to laugh, to cry, and to simply be - no judgment, just love and laughter. Who will I call now when I need that voice of reason or that laugh that heals everything?

God saw fit to bring you rest, and I find comfort knowing you are not in pain or suffering. Though I will miss you terribly, I thank God for our bond. I'll keep the joy we shared for nearly 4 decades, including our inside jokes, from "Good Times", the "Little Rascals" and countless others, and your love tucked in my heart forever. Rest easy, you'll always be a part of my story.
