“ I have many memories of Vanessa, I had known her since I had first moved here to Texas City when we were both in the 4th grade and it was clear to me the whole time that I had the privilege of knowing her, that she was the kindest soul and brought joy to the people who got to know her. In fourth grade at the Heights elementary talent show, if I remember correctly, we both performed, with her singing what I think was fight song by Rachel Platten, and I had done a karate routine with another friend of mine. During my performance, my partner accidentally kicked me in the face, and Vanessa never let me live that down. All the way to highschool she continued to bring it up in order to tease me, it was never annoying though, if anything it made me happy that she had remembered something that long ago. I would give anything to hear her tease me about that again, or for her to call me ribs, since my last name is costilla. I also had some of my best memories of her at her quince. Vanessa was stunning in her dress, everything about her was beautiful and it was so nice to see her happy at her quince. We could barely hear her talk over the loud music, but we just laughed because of the frustration. It was clear that she had a lot of fun at the party and I did as well. Vanessas quince was the first one and only one I had been to since. My last memory I will share is when she had sent me a photo over text of one of her first paintings she made when she was learning to use her left hand I believe, when she was going through her treatments. I was so proud of her, despite her using her left hand, it still looked amazing. She was an amazing artist, and I may even have some of her art with me still, I just havent brought myself to look for them yet, because it feels like I would be letting go of her and I dont think I am ready to do that. Vanessa was an amazing person, a brilliant kid, beautiful on the inside and out, funny, artistically talented, kind, an amazing friend, and was taken from us way too soon.
